NEWS FORECAST OF THE COMING WEEK

Knickerbocker Trust Company Will Open For Business on Tuesday.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., March 21.—In addition to the routine of Congress, political developments abroad and in the far East and the target practice of the American fleet at Magdalena Bay a number of other interesting events will have a place in the news of the coming week.

Presidential politics will swing along at a fast clip. Conventions to name delegates to the Chicago or Denver conventions will be held in a number of States. Illinois Republicans will meet in State convention at Springfield and instruct for Cannon. The Tennessee Republican will meet in Nashville and is expected to endorse the Taft candidacy. No instructions are expected from the Rhode Island Republican convention which is to meet in Providence.

Bryan will have things pretty much his own way with the Democratic conventions. The North Dakota State convention will be held at Grand Forks, the Iowa convention at Cedar Rapids and the Indiana convention at Indianapolis. It is expected that Bryan sentiment will dominate each of these gatherings.

Mr. Bryan will begin a busy week by entertaining the Populist and Democratic editors of Nebraska next Monday. Secretary Taft will begin the week by addressing the Chamber of Commerce at Trenton, N. J., Monday night and end it Saturday night with a speech before the Chicago Commercial Club.

The Knickerbocker Trust Company, the first of the big New York banking institutions, to close its doors during the recent panic, will reopen for business Thursday. Other events of the week that will attract more or less attention will be the opening of the second batch of alleged graft trials at Harrisburg, Pa., and the consecration of the Rev. Henry D. Robinson, D. D., to the bishopric of Nevada, which will take place Wednesday, at Reno, Wis.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, March 21.—Members of the executive committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen are here from Philadelphia, Boston and other places to attend an important meeting to be held this evening at the New York Athletic club.

In addition to deciding upon the date and place for holding the annual regatta the meeting will probably take final action in regard to the matter of sending a crew and scullers to the Olympian regatta in England next July. To judge from opinions expressed by members of the committee, the outlook for sending a crew composed of rowing club men to the Olympian regatta is decidedly unpromising.

DOUGLAS MAY BE CHOSEN AS BRYAN'S RUNNING MATE

Ex-Governor Of Massachusetts Talked Of Among The Leading Democrats.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—As Bryan will be the Democratic candidate, more and more there is talk heard among leading Democrats at the capital of ex-Governor William L. Douglas of Massachusetts being his running mate. If Mr. Douglas should be nominated it is the opinion of some Democrats that it would make Massachusetts a fighting ground.

In this connection there is an interesting story current to the effect that should the Democrats nominate Mr. Douglas the labor vote will be cast for that party. Mr. Douglas is the proprietor of large shoe factories in the Bay State, and has the reputation of being a friend of the workmen. According to the statement of one of the high officials of the American Federation of Labor, former Governor Douglas "rings true," and during his gubernatorial incumbency he showed his friendship for organized labor by his deeds rather than by words.

In addition to his reputation as a friend of Mr. Douglas possesses other qualities calculated to make him a suitable candidate for the Vice Presidency. He is looked upon as a typical American and, what is fully as much to the point, is he has the "barrel of money" which is so necessary to associate with the second place on a Presidential ticket.

The life story of Mr. Douglas is a story possible nowhere but in America. Yesterday he was poverty-stricken; today he is a multi-millionaire. Yesterday he worked from daylight until dark for five dollars a month at the shoemaker's bench, toiled in a cotton-mill for thirty-three cents a day, tramped sturdily behind a four ox team and pulled a schooner across the plains of the great West, toiled as a common laborer about a time; today he manages a business employing 3,000 men and women, with several large factories and upwards of one hundred retail stores, is a bank president and a director in other large enterprises.

Mr. Douglas is rated today as being worth millions of dollars, but his friends declare he hasn't spoiled him in the least. He is said to be as approachable today at his office in his great factories at Brockton as he was when he had a little two-story shop in the same city. His whole life is unpretentious, comfortable, democratic, American.

80TH BIRTHDAY OF OLD SETTLER

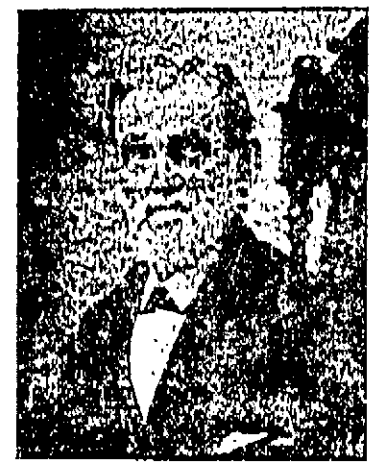

GEORGE J. KELLOGG CELEBRATES EIGHTIETH ANNIVERSARY YESTERDAY.

SETTLED HERE IN 1852

Was Gold Miner in the Days of Forty-nine—Crossed Plains With Oxen.

Yesterday, March 20th, was the 80th birthday of George J. Kellogg, who has lived in Janesville since 1852. The story of Mr. Kellogg's life recalls the times when this part of the country was new and mostly unsettled, and when Indian raids in the West were an ever present danger and the prairie schooner was the usual method of transportation across the Great Plains. He crossed the Great Plains in '49 driving five yoke of oxen, dug gold in California and returned to Wisconsin by way of the Isthmus of Panama. Appended is a letter from Mr. Kellogg.

Janesville, Wis., March 20, 1908. Editors Gazette: I am replying to a shower of four-score birthday letters. I was born in Cleora, N. Y., and received my first education in Fulton, N. Y.; emigrated to the Indian land of Wisconsin, Aug. 2, 1852; graduated under the tutelage of our talented Gov. Harvey at Kenosha, Wis.; spent 2 years in Wisconsin planning; taught school two winters; drove five yoke of oxen across the plains to California in 1849; dug gold in California three years, took out about $15,000; returned home by the Isthmus in 1852; located in Janesville and went into the nursery business. "Indoor" and "out" had made something of a success of horticulture; turned over my nursery and business to my two boys, L. L. and M. S. Kellogg, in 1899, who are just making things hum. I have seen them dig a thousand six-foot apple trees with eight horses with a tree digger, in ten minutes. They are up-to-date in everything and perfectly reliable. I moved to Lake Mills, quit work, not out a quarter of an acre to 70 rods of apples, 20 grape vines, 50 varieties of strawberries, $200 worth of plums, lots of other fruits, took 35 first prizes at Jefferson county fair 1907, and am hale and hearty, with no headache or a pain.

Read all my letters today without glasses as I am writing this. GEO. J. KELLOGG. Mr. Kellogg was the recipient of many congratulations yesterday. Among others was the following poem which was written by the Rev. Howard Kellogg of Delavan, a cousin of Mr. Kellogg. Lines on the Eightieth Anniversary of the Birth of George J. Kellogg. You have heard of the wonderful one boss hay That was built in such a logen way That it ran a hundred years to a day; But I tell you of a wonderful nursery-man That was built on such a remarkable plan That he couldn't grow old as other folks can.

Eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, March the twentieth—this was the date When my hero entered the earthly rate, John Quincy Adams was President; A score of others came and went Since this auspicious birth event. But to return to the one boss hay Which ran a hundred years to a day—Because it was built in a wonderful way, And every part was so thoroughly strong It was guaranteed to wear as long As every other part—Holmes' song. You see the man we talk about Was like this shay, so thoroughly stout In every part that he put to rout Sickness and ill of every sort. For his health was such he was little short Of making his body a health resort. Of lungs and liver and heart and brain He'd never a care, for it's perfectly plain That a healthy body is free from pain. His thoughts like his tools were with use made bright, His mind worked swift as an arrow's flight, And he finished his task with a full man's might. He could work till midnight and rise at four And joke and laugh at the daily chore, For of humor and wit he had a store.

For I had tired feeling so character-istic of the approach of Spring there is nothing so good as a few doses of the Bitters. It also cures Colds, Grippe, Sick Headache, Indigestion or Dyspepsia.

He said he worked on the eight hour line— Eight before dinner and eight before nine, And in spite of it all was feeling fine. But the calendar says he is now four score; We've a notion to doubt it; he seems little more Than a few months older than years before. When berries and apples and all the rest Were doing their utmost to keep him sweet. Of his swift advance, for he did his best.

Yes, the day and the date and the record agree That our Cousin George is now Eighty. So we come with these greetings from Fay and from me, And we trust that the years to the tenth decade May be filled with the best that the Lord has made. And may merge into dawn that shall not fade. REV. HOWARD W. KELLOGG.

JANESVILLE BOY IS A RHODES SCHOLAR

Is Awarded a Cecil Rhodes Scholarship After the Examination.

The winning of the Rhodes scholarship by Thomas McClernan, formerly of Janesville, is a distinction quite inadequately appreciated by the general public. The competition embraced all the men students in the various colleges of the state as well as those at the university. Not only this, but Mr. McClernan is practically the victor of two of these competitions, for he won two years ago and his eligibility then gained was so high as to surpass any of the many candidates who were examined this year. Another incident testifying to the superiority of Mr. McClernan is the fact that it was truly understood that the honor this time should go to a student of one of the colleges of the state and not to a university man, but the Janesville boy was so far ahead of his competitors that the presidents of the colleges who made the selection, felt that he should be appointed. He will study for three years at the historic old English university of Oxford, where a generation ago the students were almost exclusively confined to the gentry.

Mr. McClernan was given his preparatory education in the parochial school conducted by the nuns of St. Patrick's church in Janesville, and later he graduated from the Janesville high school. The family years ago lived on North High street in the first ward and it will be remembered that his father was an invalid. A sister older than Thomas McClernan, Miss Mary McClernan, was one of the youngest graduates of the Janesville high school, entering the high school when very young. She came to the university and took a number of honors for her remarkable work in Greek. She was also a highly educated and talented musician and while attending the university used to come home to Janesville every Sunday to play the pipe organ in St. Patrick's church.

ASKS CORRECTIONS AS TO STATEMENTS

Peter S. Peterson Writes Gazette Relative to the Suit Brought Against S. A. Warner.

To The Editor: In an article appearing in last night's Gazette in relation to the arrest of Samuel A. Warner, charged with running a gambling resort, the facts are somewhat misleading. The fact that myself, as well as others, have seen young boys, from fifteen to twenty years of age, in Warner's pool hall, playing Kelly pool for stakes of various amounts was the basis for my evening out the warrant. I am informed, and have seen, the house "take-off" taken from these games in which the boys played. Personally I have never played in these games, but have been a spectator always. It was when I called Warner's attention to the violation of the law in permitting these games that he became angry and ordered the lighting plant, which he had had for three months in operation, out, despite the fact he had informed me it was satisfactory and had promised to pay from time to time. I trust you will publish this to explain my position in the matter. (Signed) P. S. PETERSON.

A LITTLE TALK ABOUT GEORGE F. KIMBALL.

Do you know him? Possibly, intimately, unless you have business relations with him, for he is seldom on the street. Born here a little more than forty years ago, he worked on the railroads in Kansas for a number of years, coming back here fifteen years ago to commence at the bottom in the box factory business. By ability and strict attention to business he is now one of the partners and President of Thoroughgood & Co., and is a keen, young and successful business man, who is as square as a die, and as true as a dollar.

Mr. Kimball has successfully demonstrated his ability to manage affairs by the showing he has made at Thoroughgood & Co's.

Mr. Kimball is a good judge of men, and in sizing up conditions, he is an expert. Those who know him best say that he would rather be right than be popular. In other words, when he knows he is in the right, he has the backbone to back it up.

Mr. Kimball is a taxpayer, and has some pretty common sense views on city government. He believes the city government of Janesville is just like that of a large company, or corporation. The taxpayers are the stockholders and are entitled to a run for their money; in other words, the taxpayer's money should have just as much buying power as though it were expended by a sharp, shrewd buyer for a private firm. He believes that money paid in taxes for street purposes should be judiciously spent, with an idea of permanency. He believes that the poor man is entitled to exactly the same consideration as the man of wealth, and that there should be no FAVORITE SECTIONS of the ward for street improvements done at the expense of the ward.

In short Mr. Kimball comes as near being what the taxpayers of the City of Janesville need in the council as any one you can readily call to mind.

He is the kind of a man you would feel willing to trust your business to, if you were called out of the city, and at the same time, have the feeling that while you were away, your interests would be carefully guarded and protected.

Some of Mr. Kimball's acquaintances induced him to become a candidate for alderman. It was only after a good deal of urging that he consented to do so. It is a case of the office seeking the man, and not the man the office. In fact, Mr. Kimball is not now present in the city, having been obliged on account of a western business trip to absent himself. He does not even know what is being done for him, nor of the contents, or even the existence, of this letter.

If you feel that you would like to have your interests in the city government represented by a man of the Geo. F. Kimball pattern, then vote for him.

There is no sentiment about this matter but it is purely a matter of business and your cordial support is asked for Geo. F. Kimball, President of Thoroughgood & Company, for the nomination of Alderman in the Third Ward.

Vote for George F. Kimball, Republican candidate for alderman from the Third ward at primary election March 24th. "The man of backbone."

GARDEN TALK ON SPRING BLOSSOMS

LITTLE JOURNEY CLOSE TO NATURE IN THE SPRING.

LILACS AND SYRINGAS

First of the Two Hardy Shrubs That Blossom in the Spring Days—Garden Talk.

Janesville gardeners have already begun casting longing eyes at their proposed garden plots. Even though the winter's supply of ashes have not yet disappeared the visions of flower beds rise to view and the talk of seeds and summer pleasures is heard. Many gardens have shrubs that are the first to peep forth with foliage and flower.

One of the first shrubs to blossom this spring will be the lilac, which is deservedly among the most popular of plants. It may well be called a "queen of shrubs" and is a favorite because of its remarkable hardiness, the showy clusters of its abundant and fragrant blossoms, and its patience under cultural abuse.

The common lilac (syringa vulgaris) is the most common in the garden, and from it have sprung a large number of showy forms, which are grown in parks and by more expert gardeners. While the lilac grows in almost any soil, to obtain best results it should be planted in rich, well drained soil, somewhat heavy with a little clay in it, if possible.

The Anjou lilac is one of the more showy varieties which should have more general favor. It is a tall, slender shrub, 10 to 12 feet in height, which unfolds its leaves very early in the spring and produces large clusters of yellowish white flowers very early in June. It retains its deep green foliage well through the season.

The Persian lilac is the lowest growing variety which is well known in this country. It grows from four to seven feet in height and has very slender branches which form a graceful outline. The flowers are pale purple, and there is also a white flower form.

More than 200 named varieties of the common lilac, mentioned above, have been produced by hybridists during recent years, the new varieties far surpassing the parent line in range of brilliant colors, double flowers, size of the clusters and other characteristics.

The "mock orange" of Philadelphia is popularly known as "syringa" and the latter is the botanical name for lilac. The mock orange family comprises about thirty species of hardy, ornamental shrubs varying in height from five to twenty feet, many of them admirably adapted for the decoration of home grounds.

Perhaps the most widely grown variety of those known to the oldtime gardener as "syringae" is Philadelphia grandiflora, which grows about six feet high and has large white sweet scented flowers which appear in June. Common mock orange, (P. coronatus) reaches about ten feet in height and blooms in May or June and is very fragrant. The flowers are pure white and are borne in dense clusters, often so numerous as to bend the branches down to the ground.

Gordon's mock orange, (P. Gordon-janus) is a native of the United States and in good ground often reaches ten or twelve feet in height. It has glaucous green foliage with grayish brown branches. The flowers are white and produced in great abundance. They bloom in June or July in central latitudes.

This plant thrives in almost any well drained soil and often does well in the shade of trees and buildings. Pruning should be done after the shrubs have flowered, as the blossoms

MADE SETTLEMENT WITH SAM MACKIE

St. Paul Road Paid Him Several Hundred Dollars Damages For Its Neglect to Bridge Turtle Creek.

On a basis of a cash consideration of several hundred dollars, a settlement was reached this week in the case of Samuel Mackie vs. the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Co., which was to have been tried in circuit court. About two years ago Mackie commenced an action to recover $1,500 for damages alleged to have been caused him by the failure of the railroad company to build a new bridge to replace the old one across Turtle creek, a mile east of Beloit, at the time the channel was swayed from its original course to the ditch along the embankment of the tracks. The plaintiff claimed that this "no thoroughfare" situation lost for him his business of hauling the mounding sand or light clay found in heavy deposits on his land, to the Evans-Morse plant. The railroad attorneys at first claimed that the obligation to build the bridge rested on the town of Turtle, but after a legal battle had been started to determine this question, finally built the structure. J. W. Adams and Jeffris, Mount, Smith & Avery represented Mackie and A. A. Jackson was counsel for the railroad company.

There are many men who wear their hats practically all the time when awake, and are blessed with a heavy shock of hair; yet if the scalp of these same men once became infested with dandruff germs, the parasites would multiply all the quicker for lack of air. Dandruff would ensue as the final result. Now, here's the remedy. It kills these germs and stimulates unhealthy hair to abundant growth. It is a pleasant hair dressing as well as a dandruff cure and contains not an atom of injurious substance. Sold by leading druggists. Send for a sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

"What Do You Want When You Choose a Dentist?"

The very first essential is "Good work."
"Any old thing" won't do when it comes to work in your mouth.
Another desirability is Painless work.

A careful, conscientious, painstaking operator like Dr. Richards uses every possible means at hand to avoid causing you pain.
A third feature which cuts quite a figure is "Reasonable Prices."
They say you can pay $5,000 for an automobile, or you can get a good serviceable machine for $1000 if you wish. Some makers get far more than others for their output.
It is the same in Dentistry.

Some dentists prefer to do a small practice at large prices to each individual.
Others like Dr. Richards, prefer to do a large practice at a smaller fee from each patient.

Dr. Richards has fixed up many a decayed tooth for free, and sent the patient away so satisfied in every way that he has sent all his family and friends for their work.
Whereas he might have charged the man $2.00 and never seen him again.
Sum it up and you find it about this way:
"Good work."
"Painless work."
"Reasonable Prices."

SPRINTER-CROOK CUCKOO COLLINS

SENT FROM HERE TO THE PENITENTIARY IN 1904.

AGAIN BEHIND THE BARS

Was Arrested on Suspicion in Philadelphia This Week—Story of His Checkered Career.
James ("Cuckoo") Collins, who was sent from here to the state prison at Vaucluse, on December 16, 1904, to serve two years and three months for forgery and who completed his sentence in December, 1906, and was just sent to the penitentiary in June, 1907, is again behind the bars. City Marshal W. H. Appleby today received the following letter from the Department of Public Safety, Bureau of Police, Detective Service, Room 527, City Hall, Philadelphia:

March 19, 1908.
Chief of Police,
Janesville, Wis.
Dear Sir:—I beg to enclose herewith a photograph and description of James Collins, and to request you kindly to advise me whether he is likely to advise me whether he is so, what record he bears. He has been arrested on suspicion.
Yours truly,
F. O'LEARY,
Asst. Supt. of Police.

On the back of the photograph are Cuckoo's birthplace, measurements; the statement that he was arrested on Wednesday, March 18, by Detective Tucker; and the amusing statistics of his birth in Portland, Oregon, and of his slightly yellow complexion.

Career as Sprinter-Crook.
As a matter of fact, Collins was born at Edgerton, Wis., on April 3, 1865, and his only legitimate occupation has been that of a foot-racer in many quarters of the world. At the age of twenty he made his first formal acquaintance with the officers of the law, serving a year for larceny in the county jail at Janesville. While tending a horse as a trustee he perfected himself in the art of sprinting and springing. It was however, on July 4, 1879, that he ran his first notable race, defeating "Pete" Brown, a U. of W. athlete, in the 100 yard dash. In 1880 he trained with Charlie Mitchell, the prize fighter, Evan Lewis, the wrestler, and Farmer Burke, the boxer. According to the story he related here just before he went to prison, he was first dubbed "The Cuckoo" by his admirers when he defeated H. M. Johnson who had won the Sheffield handicap in England. After that he trained the Huron, South Dakota, horse team and followed the game at Sioux City, Des Moines, Carney, Neb., and other places. About this time, under the name of "Comfort," he threw a race in which he, as representative of the city of Superior, was pitted against the champion of Duluth, and narrowly escaped with his life from the wrath of his backers. At Louisville in July, 1887, he won a race from a sprinter backed by James Pennoch, a millionaire sportsman. After Collins had lost Charles Melver at Montreal in 1887, Pennoch took him to England and backed him to win the Sheffield handicap. According to his story he got 3,500 pounds sterling for throwing a race on which Pennoch had wagered 20,000 pounds. This was on December 21 and 25, 1888. On Feb. 10, 1890, he defeated Andrew Jackson at Harwich, Scotland. In 1892 he was racing a horse with the Harman & Bailey circus. Subsequently he ran against Tom Kerr of Cripple Creek and won from him in 9 3/4 seconds. Shortly thereafter he pulled off a crooked race at Albuquerque, New Mexico, and was arrested with others for conspiracy. He obtained his release on this charge and shipped before the mast for Australia. Just about the time the Denver police had connected him with the bold theft of a tray of diamonds in that city, he returned to California some years later, he was arrested in Sacramento and sentenced to a term of years in the Canyon City penitentiary. After a year or two he escaped from the coal mines, closely pursued by bloodhounds, and fled to Liverpool. In 1901 he was on a steamship carrying recruits for the Boer war to Cape Town and prisoners to St. Helena and the Bermudas. In 1903 he was back in New York and later in Chicago and St. Louis.

Arrested Here For Forgery.
It was on Dec. 2, 1904, that he was arrested at Smith's hotel in this city for forgery. With a companion named James Logan he had visited Edgerton, the city of his nativity, and after "renewing acquaintances," had tendered at C. H. Babcock's store in the Tobacco City, a $500 draft purporting to be drawn by the First National bank of Butte, Montana, in payment for a suit of clothes. Mr. Babcock was suspicious and took the draft to the Edgerton bank. It was ascertained by the bank register that the name of the cashier given there was not the one appearing on the draft. Logan begged Babcock to telegraph Butte at his expense, and while this was being done, he and "Cuckoo" took to the tall timber. President A. J. Davis of the Butte bank happened to be in Chicago when the two men were arrested here and came here to testify against them. Seeing that the game was up, they pleaded guilty and took their punishment.

H. H. GIESE STILL CAMPING ON TRAIL?

Writes to Ascertain Location of Home Office of Company R. A. Winslow Represents.

According to the statement made by H. A. Winslow in Thursday's Gazette, on a certain seemingly sensational episode which was reported as having occurred at Madison last Saturday, the representations made by H. H. Giese that he was in the U. S. revenue service were without foundation. A letter received by City Marshal Appleby this morning is written on the official stationery of the Treasury Department, Office of Collector of Internal Revenue, Tenth District of Ohio, and hardly bears out Mr. Winslow's assertion. The letter may be of some local interest and the full text is given:

Toledo, O., March 20, 1908.
Mr. W. H. Appleby,
Janesville, Wis.

My dear Sir: I take this means of extending to you my sincere thanks for the assistance and courtesies extended to myself while in your city, and to assure you that the same were highly appreciated.

There is one thing that I neglected to find out while there, and that is the home office of the concern Winslow represents. It is the Northwestern Portland Cement Co. and if you can do so without discommending yourself, I will appreciate it very much if you can find out the location of the home office of that concern.

I have seen some of the newspaper items concerning my affair, and regret that there should have been so much publicity given it.

With kind regards to yourself and your assistants, believe me, Yours very sincerely
H. H. GIESE.

ROCKFORD STRAINS FOR RIVER MYSTERY

Newspapers of Quiet Town to the Southward Try to Weave Sensation Around Officer Champion's Brother.

Officer Peter Champion is somewhat curious, though not seriously worried about a story appearing in the Rockford Star of March 19 to the effect that a bottle picked up on the banks of the Rock River below Oregon bore a mysterious message from his brother, who the newspaper represents as not having been seen about his usual haunts since last summer. The communication, written on a piece of wrapping paper, was as follows:

"George Champion jumped into the river from the northwestern bridge at Rockford, July 28, 1907. If this note is found by anyone please notify Sam Ross, 298 S. Main St., Rockford, Ill."

The note was taken to Ross, as requested, and the newspaper goes on to speculate as to whether it is all a hoax or some tragedy really happened. Inasmuch as Officer Champion saw his brother last September and Mrs. Champion saw him as late as February, the former can only conclude that if he did jump in, he jumped right out again.

Reception to Art Lovers.
Miss L. A. Dow of Madison will cordially welcome all interested in water-colors and china painting at Peck's, 15 W. Milwaukee St., next Tuesday and Wednesday, March 24 and 25, when she will have a large display of her work.

FROM HIS STANDPOINT.

Mrs. Bennett Sells Large Monuments to Local People.
F. W. Freeborn recently closed the contract for a beautiful twelve-ton monument for the Hall estate, also for an eight-ton monument for Mrs. Wm. Menzies, both to be set in Mount Pleasant cemetery. Other monuments which she has sold recently are to Mr. J. J. Mitchell of Milton and Mrs. F. King of Highland Center, besides a large number of the monuments, markers, etc., to go to Stoughton, and another to go to Broadhead. She has recently set a large monument for the Deacon Lester P. Roger's estate of Milton Junction, also one for Mr. P. C. Dunn of Milton, both of which are the pieces of work.

All this goes to show that Mrs. Bennett has the confidence of the public, which has been gained through the good work this firm has put out in the past forty years.

Mrs. Bennett buys nothing but the very best stock and does not buy any of the culls which the quarry men have worked up through the winter when work has been slack. She does not go to the quarry today and order a carload of stock to be shipped inside of a month because she uses nothing but perfect work, therefore it takes several months for her to have her stock built up everything is built under the direct supervision of men who understand the business thoroughly.

Mrs. Bennett does business in an honest and reliable manner and employs none but skilled workmen.

DECIDING GAME AT APPLETON APRIL 1

Janesville and Waukesha Basketball Teams Will Play Off Their Tie.

On April first the basketball game between Janesville and Waukesha high school teams, which was to have been played in Madison today, will be played in the Lawrence University gymnasium at Appleton. This game will decide which team may enter the state meet to compete in the state championship series. Another mistake occurred in the arrangement of the game between the local girls' team and Watertown scheduled for last evening. Mr. Wisman made arrangements with the former manager of the Watertown team to come here last evening, but later it was discovered that the arrangements had been made with a former manager, not the present one, and that the team knew nothing of the arrangements and had a game scheduled for last night at home.

ABRUZZI TO WED KATHERINE ELKINS

OFFICIAL JOURNAL AT ROME ADMITS THE ENGAGEMENT.

SENATOR TO BE A NOBLE

King of Italy Will Bestow a Title on Young Woman's Father Before the Wedding Takes Place.

Rome, Mar. 21.—All doubt regarding the approaching marriage of the duke of the Abruzzi and Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of the American senator, was dispelled Friday when the fact of their engagement was admitted in the official journal.

Senator Elkins, according to the journal, is to be ennobled by the king, in order that the duke's bride may be a titled woman before she is wedded to the duke.

The duke is to be promoted to the rank of vice-admiral and will have his residence in the royal palace in Venice.

Duke About to Leave America.

Washington, Mar. 21.—After a flying visit of three days to Washington, the duke of the Abruzzi left at ten o'clock Friday as unceremoniously and as mysteriously as he came to the city. It is said he will depart from New York Saturday, en route to Italy, sailing probably by the Cunard liner Lusitania with his valet. Practically all the information obtainable at the Italian embassy regarding the duke's future movements is that he will return to the United States in the near future. His leave of absence from command of the warship Regina Elena has expired and he is returning home again to assume charge of the vessel.

Statement by Ambassador.

Italian Ambassador Mayor des Planches and his official and unofficial household have uniformly maintained the greatest reticence in regard to the movements and doings of the duke, averring that he was traveling in his private capacity of a gentleman whose personal affairs were nobody's business but his own. In view, however, of the various publications respecting the duke's visit to this country and especially to Washington and the reported results, the Italian ambassador consented to give out through his secretary an informal statement bearing on the subject. It was substantially as follows:

"The question of an engagement is a private matter and nobody has a right to know anything about it. The statement that there was a meeting of the Elkins family at the Italian embassy several nights ago is absolutely false. No member of the Elkins family has been at the embassy, either during the duke's visit nor for a long period prior to that time."

In Baltimore with Miss Elkins.

Baltimore, Md., Mar. 21.—Miss Katherine Elkins and the duke of the Abruzzi came here Friday afternoon by automobile from Washington as a surprise to Senator Elkins, who was here to attend the funeral of the late Senator Whyte. Later the three returned to Washington in the automobile.

GAVE HIS MONEY TO HOBBOES.

Pittsburg Man Is Put Under Arrest in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mar. 21.—A man giving his name as James L. Taylor, from Pittsburg, Pa., with a week's growth of beard on his face and clothing rather threadbare, was arrested at Seventh and Market streets Friday because he was handing out five and ten-dollar bills to a crowd of hoboes that surrounded him.

"What am I arrested for?" he asked Sergeant McNamee.

"Because you don't know how to take care of your money," replied the officer.

"Well, what's it for but to give away. I tell her to $5,000 and I have a right to give my money away. I'm from Pittsburg."

But he was taken to the police station just the same.

Another Charge Against Lyle.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Mar. 21.—A second charge was preferred Friday against Frank W. Lyle, president of the defunct City bank of Dowagiac, Mich., who was arrested on the charge of embezzling funds of the Order of Elks to the amount of $1,500. The charge is receiving deposits in his bank after the bank was insolvent and is preferred by Martin Gephart, a merchant, who deposited $200 a few minutes before the bank closed.

SHIP SUBSIDY BILL WINS

SENATE PASSES THE MEASURE WITH AMENDMENTS.

President Denounced in House by Georgian Representative and Defended by Mann of Illinois.

Washington, Mar. 21.—The ship subsidy bill was passed by the senate Friday. It pays to 16-knot vessels plying between this country and South America, the Philippines, Japan, China and Australia, four dollars per mile, the amount awarded by the act of 1891 to vessels of 20 knots only.

The bill was amended in the senate so that 12-knot vessels will receive two dollars per mile, which is the allowance under existing law to 10-knot vessels. Amendments were also adopted providing that if two or more lines of steamships ply from Atlantic ports to South America under the provisions of the bill, one line shall stop at two ports south of Cape Charles, and stipulating that no more shall be paid for subsidies than is received from such service by the government.

During the consideration of the measure Mr. Hale made a spirited plea for an auxiliary navy, declaring that without auxiliary navy the navy is dependent upon foreign countries and that in case of war we would be helpless.

More criticism of President Roosevelt was indulged in in the house of representatives, when he was roundly denounced by Mr. Hardwick of Georgia, for failing to send to congress all information regarding corporations which had come into his possession. The president, however, found a ready and vigorous defender in Mr. Mann of Illinois, who asserted that the president had acted with the utmost good faith in sending to congress all the information that had come to him.

The discussion arose over a resolution by Mr. Hardwick to require the president to supply the house with all data so far obtained by the bureau of corporations. The resolution was tabled 143 to 115.

WON'T PRINT REICHSTAG NEWS.

German Papers Stand by Their Insulted Parliamentary Reporters.

Berlin, Mar. 21.—The newspapers of Berlin and the provinces have unanimously decided not to print a word of the Reichstag debates until adequate retraction is offered for the insulting expression of "swine" addressed to the reporters' gallery Thursday by Herr Groeber, leader of the Center party, because fears had come from this division at a statement used by a member to the effect that negroes also had immortal souls.

The official news agencies are compelled, according to their agreements, to take down the declarations of the ministers stenographically. These, however, are merely supplied to the various ministries and officers. The parliamentary reporters of the newspapers abstained altogether from attending the Reichstag Friday and as a result no fewer than 12 deputies who had intended to speak on the colonial budget withdrew their names from the president's list and refused to address the house at a time when their remarks would not be given publicity.

He was sent to jail with bail fixed at $50,000.

THE MYSTERY

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE
And SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY M. CLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

About halfway up the cliff Throckles fired his fifth shot. No dust followed the discharge, and I saw Percy Darrow stagger and almost lose his hold. The men yelled savagely, but the assistant pulled himself together and continued his crawling.

The man had been shivering in our faces. I could imagine its blurring of feet on the cliffs. Now abruptly it was blotted out, and a semicircular light fell. We all looked up in spite of ourselves. An opaque veil had been drawn quite across the heavens, through which we could not make out even the shape of the sun. It was like a thunder cloud except that its under-surface instead of being the usual gray black was a deep earth brown. As we looked up a deep hollow stirred the air, which had fallen quite still, long forks of lightning shot horizontally from the direction of the island's interior, and flashes of dull red were reflected from the canopy of cloud.

The firing now became intermittent.

The men stared with their mouths open. Undoubtedly the change had been some time in preparation, but all had been so absorbed in the affair of the doctor's assistant that no one had noticed. It came to our consciousness with the suddenness of a theatrical change. A dull roaring commenced, grew in volume, and then a great explosion shook the very ground under our feet.

We stared at each other, our faces white.

"What kind of hell has broke loose?" muttered Pulz.

The bigger fell flat on his face, uttering deep lamentations.

"Voodoo! Voodoo!" he groined.

A gentle shower of white flakes began, powdering the surface of everything. Far out to sea we could make out the sun on the water. Gradually the roaring died down. The lightning ceased. Comparative peace ensued. We looked again toward the cliff. Percy Darrow had not for one instant ceased to climb. He was just topping the edge of the bluff. Handy Solomon with a cry of rage seized another rifle and emptied the magazine at him as fast as the lever could be worked. The dust flew wild in a half dozen places. Darrow drew himself up to the sky line, raised his hat, ironically and disappeared. "His soul!" cried Handy Solomon, his face livid. He threw his rifle to the beach and danced on it in an ecstasy of rage.

"What do you care?" growled Throckles. "He's no good to us. What I want to know is what's up here any more?"

"Did you ever see a volcano go off, you swab?" snapped Handy Solomon.

"Easy with your names, mate. No, I never did. We better get out."

"Without the chest?"

"If you go up the gulch and get it, then," suggested Throckles.

But at this Handy Solomon drew back in evident terror.

"Up to that hole?" he objected. "Not I. You go!"

They wrangled over it. Pulz joining, Perdon, shaken to the soul, crept in and made a bee line for the ram barrel. He and the bigger were frankly scared. They had the nervous jumps at every little noise or unexpected movement, and even the natural explanation of these phenomena gave them very little reassurance. I knew that Darrow would hurry as fast as he could back to the valley by way of the upper hills. I knew that he had these several sporting rifles, and I hoped greatly that he and Dr. Schermerhorn might accomplish something before the men had recovered their wits to the point of foregoing his probable attack. The meaning cloud in the heavens, the weird half light and the explosions, which now grew more frequent, had their strong effect in spite of explanation. The men were not really afraid to venture in quest of the supposed treasure, but they were in a frame of mind that dreaded the first plunge. And time was going by.

But the fates were against us, as always in this ill-starred voyage. I, watching from the same dune, saw a second figure emerge from the arroyo's mouth. It appeared to stagger as though hurt, and every eight or ten paces it stopped and rested in a bent over position. The murky light was too dim for me to make out details. But after a moment a rift in the veil enabled me to identify Dr. Schermerhorn carrying, with great difficulty, the chest.

CHAPTER XXIII.

I TOOK no chances, but began at once to shout as soon as I saw the men had noticed his coming. It was impossible for me to tell whether or not Dr. Schermerhorn heard me. If he did he misunderstood my intention, for he continued painfully to advance. The only result I gained was to get myself well gagged with my own pocket handkerchief and thrown in a hollow between the dunes. Thence I could hear Handy Solomon speaking hoarsely and rapidly.

"Now you let me run this," he commanded. "We got to find out something. It isn't no good to us without we know, and we want to find out how he's got the rest hid."

"They assisted."

"I'm going out to help him carry her in," announced the seaman.

A long pause ensued, in which I watched the deep canopy of red black thickened overhead. A strange and unearthly light had fallen on the world, and the air was quite still. After awhile I heard Handy Solomon and Dr. Schermerhorn join the group.

"There you are, professor," cried Handy Solomon in tones of the greatest heartiness. "I'll bet her right there, and she'll be as safe as a baby at home. She's heavy, though."

Dr. Schermerhorn laughed and panted and excited laugh. I could tell by the tone of his voice that he was strong and guessed that his triumph needed no audience.

"You may say so well," he said. "It is heavy, and it is heavy with the world desire, the great substance that can do everything. Where is Percy?"

"He's gone aboard."

"We must embark. The time is just right. A day sooner and the experiment would have been spoilt, but now—" he laughed—"let the island sink, we do not care. We must embark hastily."

"I'll take a man long time to carry down all your things, professor."

"Oh, led them go! The eruption has already swallowed them up. The lava has by now a foot deep in the valley. Before long it flows here, so we must embark."

"But you've lost all them valuable things, professor," said Handy Solomon. "Now, I call that hard luck."

Dr. Schermerhorn snapped his fingers.

"They do not amount to that!" he cried. "Here, here, in this little box is all the treasure! Here is the labor of ten years! Here is the laughing lass and all the crew and all the equipment comprised. Here is the world!"

"I'm a plain seaman, professor, and I suppose I got to believe you, but she's a damn small box for that."

"With that small box you can have all your wishes," asserted the professor, still in the German lyric strain over his triumph. "It is the box of enchantments. You but but to will the change you would have it place—it is done. The substance of the rocks, the molecule—all!"

"Could a man make diamonds?" asked Pulz abruptly. I could hear the sharp intake of the men's breathing as they hung on the reply.

"Much more wonderful changes than that it can accomplish," replied the doctor, with an indulgent laugh. "That change has simple. Carbon has coal, carbon has diamond. You see? This has but to change the form, not the substance."

"Then it'll change coal to diamonds?" asked Handy Solomon.

"Yes; you gather my meanings!"

I heard a sharp squeak like a terrified mouse. Then a long, dreadful silence; then two dull, heavy blows, spaced with deliberation. A moment later I caught a glimpse of Handy Solomon bent forward to the labor of dragging a body toward the sea, his steel claw hooked under the angle of the jaw as a man handles a fish. Pulz came and threw off my bonds and gag.

"Come along!" said he.

All kept looking fearfully toward the arroyo. A dense white steam marked its course. The air was now heavy with potent, successive explosions, some light, some severe, shook the foundations of the island. Great rocks and boulders bounded down the hills. The flashes of lightning had become more frequent. We moved, exaggerated to each other's vision by the strange light, uncouth and glaucous.

"Let's get out of this!" cried Throckles.

We turned at the word and ran. Throckles staggering under the weight of the chest. All our belongings we abandoned and set out for the laughing lass with only the tatters in which we stood. Luckily for us a great part of the ship's stores had been returned to her hold after the dust thorough scrubbing, so we were in substance, but all our clothes, all our personal belongings, were left behind us on the beach. For after once we had topped the cliff that led over to the core I doubt if any consideration on earth would have induced us to return to that accursed place.

The row out to the ship was wet and dangerous. Seismic disturbances were undoubtedly responsible for high pyramidal waves that lifted and fell with outward movement. We fairly tumbled up out of the dory, which we did not hold on deck, but left at the end of the painter to beat her sides against the ship.

CHAPTER XXIV.

OUR haste, however, availed us little, for there was no wind at all. We lay for over two hours under the weird light, overcast by the red brown cloud, while the explosions shook the foundations of the world. Nobody ventured below. The sails flapped idly from the mast; the blocks and spurs creaked; the three cornered waves rose straight up and fell again as though reaching from the deep.

When the men first began to sweat the sails up, evidently in preparation for an immediate departure, I objected vehemently.

"You aren't going to leave him on the island?" I cried. "He'll die of starvation."

"They did not answer me, but after a little more, when my expostulations had become more positive, Handy Solomon dropped the hailand and drew me to one side.

"Look here, you," he snarled, "you'd better slow your gait. You're lucky to be here yourself, let alone botherin' your thick head about anybody else. You can kiss the book on that! Do you know why you ain't with them cur-lions?" He jerked his thumb toward the beach. "It's because Solomon Anderson's your friend. Throckles would have killed you in a minute 'count of his bit hand. I got you your chance. Now, stand between you and them an' other time. Besides, he won't last long if that volcano keeps at it."

He left me. Whatever truth lay in his assumption of friendship, and I doubted there existed much of either truth or friendship in him, I saw the common sense of his advice. I was in no position to dictate a course of action.

After the sails were on her we gathered at the starboard rail to watch the shore. There the hills ran into lumpy blackness, as the horizon sometimes merges into a thunder squall. A dense white steam came from the creek bed within the arroyo. The surges beat on the shore louder than the ordinary, and the foam even in these day hours seemed to throw up a faint phosphorescence. Frequent earthquakes oscillated the landscape. We watched, I do not know for what, our eyes straining into the murk of the island. Nobody thought of the chest, which lay on the cabin table aft. I contributed maliciously my bit to their fear.

A JANESVILLE CASE

Many More Like It in Janesville.

The following case is but one of many similar occurring daily in Janesville. It is an easy matter to verify its correctness. Surely you cannot ask for better proof than such conclusive evidence.

Chas. W. Allen, of 126 Chatham

DOG AIDED HELPLESS FRIEND.

Remarkable feat of canine intelligence put on record.

A writer in the Cornhill Magazine narrates an incident which occurred to Miss Napier during her stay in Algiers. A large dog kept for protection was taught to go to the baker's every morning for bread, and his business was to bring home 12 rolls in a basket; but for several mornings it was observed that there were only 11 rolls, and on making inquiry and watching the dog, he was found to stop on his way home and to bestow one roll on a poor half starved female dog, who lay with her puppies in a corner not far from the road. The baker was then told to put 13 rolls in the basket, and then for some days the dog brought 12. After a time the whole 13 were brought home regularly; a sign, as it was found, that his friend, the mother, was now contented, and able to do without help.

Taste.

Every man's taste is valid for himself; none may presume to instruct another. The taste of a navy who struts into a picture gallery is quite as authoritative, or, better, quite as nugatory, as that of its trained curator. Accordingly, the task of a museum is to grow systematically in the sunshine of science, avoiding the moonshine of aesthetic uncertainties. Evidently, if this objection is based on any truth it is decisive. But it is based not on truth at all, but upon a strangely morbid timidity in the academic temperament. It is a typical idol of the scientific cult. Unquestionably such impotence of taste frequently exists in specialists. Charles Darwin has recorded the gradual withering of his aesthetic life. It has remained for our times to exalt this incapacity, this malady of the soul, into a high scientific virtue.—Atlantic Monthly.

DRESSMAKING

You can learn to make a dress like this.

Pupils who know absolutely nothing about sewing learn to make dresses like this one in six weeks time by taking our course of dressmaking.

The day of guesswork and arbitrary patterns in dressmaking has gone by. Dressmakers should cut no successful tailors do—with a first class system.

A pattern can be cut so perfectly that the garment can be stitched complete without a try-on—not just occasionally—but regularly.

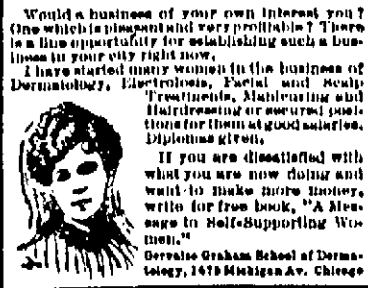

Start now and complete the course in time to do your summer sewing.

This is the first institution of its kind that has ever made a success in Janesville. Its success is attributed to the perfection of its system. Over 150 ladies enrolled in the past seven months. Could you make a mistake by learning dressmaking?

Call at the class room and interview the students and see the actual work in operation. If you cannot call, send for our complete literature. It's yours for a postal.

A GOOD BUSINESS FOR WOMEN

A Sham Love of Country.

"Our country" is an entity of which most American citizens are proud. They love their country. They will serve it, they will die for it; they resent any insult to our flag, and would make war with all the world rather than submit to dishonor. And yet thousands of our countrymen who thus cherish a national ideal are grafters, bribees, or bribed, advocates of corruption and agents of it in all that pertains to the business of the nation. They do not love the nation, but they love their country. The latter is an ideal, like religion. But the nation they regard as an everyday affair, and their dealings with it like the business they do with sharp traders, in which each man considers lawful plunder whatever he can make by exercise of his wit.—Christian Register.

A Remarkable Wagon.

J. D. Hoyer of Shohola township, Pike county, Pennsylvania, has a farm wagon the woodwork of which he built himself in 1863 in a wagon shop in Barryville, N. Y., in which he was an apprentice. Mr. Hoyer did all the woodwork on the wagon by lamplight, sawed the hubs, split and hewed every spoke, felloe and axle. Purchasing a farm in Shohola township the same year, Mr. Hoyer took his wagon with him to the farm and has used it constantly ever since. He has never had the tires set or a dollar's worth of repair done to it, and to all appearance it is good for another century. Aside from good workmanship and material the secret of its lasting qualities is due to the fact that it has always been housed when not in use.

Fifty Kinds of Headache.

"There are more than 50 kinds of headache," said a physician, "and sufferers from the more common forms may cure themselves accordingly. The more frequent forms are a dull pain across the forehead, due to dyspepsia; a pain in the back of the head, due to the liver; a bursting pain in both temples, due to malnutrition; an ache on the top of the head, as though a weight pressed on the skull, due to overwork; an ache between the brows just above the base of the nose, due to eye strain."

Little "Originality."

There is almost no such thing as "originality." As some one says: "The ancients have stolen our best thoughts." Shakespeare, Milton, Cervantes, Goethe, Moliere, Montaigne, Sterne, Swift, the whole company of great writers, "borrow" right and left. Goethe declared one day that if all that he had borrowed should be taken away from him, he would have but a few pages left, and Montaigne does not hesitate to say that he helped himself to whatever he could find.

The Blowpoke.

"Isn't Dubley the back number, though? He's begun now to take up the study of jifitsu." "That so? How's he making out?" "Wonderfully for him. He has almost learned how to pronounce it."

Strength of Yate.

Official tests of the many valuable hard woods native to western Australia have made known the extraordinary properties of yate, believed to be the strongest of all known woods. Its average tensile strength is 24,000 pounds to the square inch, equalling that of good cast iron. Many specimens are, however, much stronger, and one was tested up to 17½ tons to the square inch, which is equal to the tensile strength of wrought iron. The yate timber of yate is probably the strongest in the world. The tree grows to a maximum height of 100 feet and has sometimes a diameter of two and a half or even three feet.

How to Be Happy.

The record of happiness in every life is to be doing what you feel you can do best, and to have your own inglenook. To do what you can do best includes the entire gamut, from housekeeper to social queen, though I should like to turn the gamut upside down by putting the housemaker at the top instead of the bottom of the scale. Your own inglenook you must have, married or single, if you would take into your life all the happiness it offers, and give out of your life all the happiness it owes the community.—London Pall Mall Gazette.

Conscience.

German proverb: A good conscience is heaven, a bad one hell.
